VOLUME XXXIX. NUMBER 1

OUR "reform" Governor is doing all in his power to build a bigger machine than ever was dreamed of in Missouri before.

A YEAR ago we said that Folk and "fake" were synonymous. After his six months' occupancy of the gubernatorial chair we are more firm in the belief now than we were then.

THE appointment of Dr. Kuhn, 'way up on the Kansas line, to the position of Superintendent of the Farmington Asylum is a slap at the intelligence and the fitness of the people of Southeast Missouri. That's all there is to it.

DR. KEITH has proven himself a very efficient and capable superintendent of the Farmington Asylum. But he wasn't a Folk man and so he had to go to make way for a doctor that was a Folk man. This is our great "reform" Governor's idea of conducting an eleemosynary institution.

PASSING by the alleged cause of the throwing over of the officials of Farmington Asylum—a matter concerning which the public is kept in blissful ignorance—I wish to direct attention to the newly chosen. No person in this part of the State knows Dr. Kuhn of Kansas City, but I'll bet he was a Folk-or-bust shouter last year, and to this virtue, above all others he may possess, he owes his appointment. Bro. Waters, the new secretary, tore his undergarment for Folk last campaign, but I have nothing to say against him, and have reason to believe he will make a good secretary, and Mrs. Waters, recommended by the Board to be Superintress, is no doubt equal to the demands of the position. Against the personnel of the new management and officers I urge nothing. But I wish to call attention to the fact that the new machine recognizes no one who refuses to fall down and worship at the shrine of Little Joey. The old machine was a Democratic machine; the new is for Folk and him only. Democracy cuts no ice with it. Some of the officials appointed by him to the institution refused to support the Democratic national tickets in 1896 and 1900, and laugh in their sleeves at the fool rank and file who stood by the party and its platforms those years. The sole qualification for trust and honor these days, at Jefferson City, is Folkism; the principles the party has always stood for, go for nothing. These are the days of fakery and cheap exploitation, and happy the he who can bow in submission to the new order of things. But I prefer to keep the faith with old friends. Demagogery, false pretense and holier-than-thousness are struggling, prancing, neck-curved, tail-lifted cattle, but they are as treacherous as showy, and I hope to live to see the whole bunch—after their manner—buck and kick themselves into the mire of deserved oblivion.

THE following, which I reproduce here, is from The Centor, a St. Louis publication which hits right and left, and tells wholesome truths without fear or favor. I hope that every reader of the REGISTER will carefully peruse this article, and do a little thinking as he reads: "One sign of national disaster that may follow, is the only too apparent disposition of the American people to more and more look toward the head of their government as the individual who can solve any difficulty, perhaps in the same way that the monarch of old cured erysipelas—by a mere miraculous touch. It is that abject and childlike dependence on something else, which is the direct opposite of manhood. Did we not the other day see each side in the Chicago strike, threatening the other side with Roosevelt? 'Wait until the President gets here,' each side snorted. 'Then we'll show you!' It was like two small boys telling each other what would happen 'when papa gets home.' Roosevelt went to Chicago, all right, and the American people held their breaths to see what he intended to do. The labor people had the decency to present the form of an excuse for their idolatry of the one man power, for they approached Theodore on the faked-up proposition of Federal troops, of which matter he could, of course, take official cognizance as Commander-in-chief of the army. But it was on matters that in no way concern him as an official, and in which he should have remained strictly neutral in the interest of all the people, that each side wanted him to meddle in its interest. And Roosevelt meddled, all right, although he said nothing either wise or witty, but confined himself, as usual, to an elaborate argument in proof of the perfectly obvious. Since then we have heard that Roosevelt is to be called on to settle the Equitable scandal, to reprimand Grover Cleveland for what he said about women, to make Dr. Mary Walker quit wearing pants, to make everybody call 'Bob' Evans 'Fighting Bob,' to revise prize ring rules, to rebuke Chauncey Depew for the childless condition of his last marriage, to make the 'four flush' a forbidden play to everybody but T. R., to make blue laws national, to make out an universal freight tariff similar to a perpetual calendar, and do a million other things of pith and moment. In Missouri, 'Joe' Folk is the god who is invoked. Folk is to be appealed to to do this, that and the other. He has already constituted himself a sort of State policeman and makes the rounds to see that everybody intends to be good. Mothers threaten bad boys with Folk. Such abdication of American citizenship as is involved in this constant disposition to call on one higher up is a disgrace to the Republic. It is a recognition of the ancient doctrine of the power of the overlord. It is childish, but if continued, may lead us back to the centralized governmental forms from which we think we have emerged. How the Fathers of the Republic would have hated the present day disposition to turn to a patriarch or over-lord for outside help in problems we ourselves should solve! They believed that the individual was the sovereign, and that with him in his separate or combined capacities, lay all the power there was in the solution of difficulties. The President, to them, was not a kind father, to come to his children's help on occasion, or give them a sound flogging when he thought they deserved it, but one of themselves, their servant, whose duties, powers and limits were most exactly defined. But the Fathers of the Republic were men. They proved it and had a right to believe in manhood sovereignty."
